BREED THEATER.

The Half-Breed's Daughter, Marvelous Indian Drama.

Indian Drama.

The programme of high grade motion pletures at the Breed today inclindes what is conceded to be the finest story of Indian life on this season's list of film releases. Not blood and thundred, but a story that deals with the heart interests of a half-breed, whose only joy and companion is a young daughter of perhaps seventeen years. A dashing young miner clopes with the girl during the Indian father's absence, and linally finding her a hindrance to his occupation, deserts her, and, after severe exposures, she wanders through the wild ravines looking for her old cable home. Meanwhile her father's sorrow knows no bounds, and after fruitless searching for her he returns home, and as he sits by the doorway he sees her crawling on the ground towards him too weary, too sad to speak. She simply points to the direction from whence she came and expires in her father's arms. Then all of the ameestral blood is stirred, and he starts on the long journey of vengence. He finds the recreamt lover, and, taking him unawares, forces him backwards over the precipice of ragged rocks, to the rushing stream below, and instant death. wares, forces film backwards over the precipice of ragged rocks, to the rushing stream below, and instant death. A genuine Indian, Eagle Eye by name plays the leading role, and it is seidom that the most finished actor of the white blood equals his masterly work. There is a pathetic charm, an appealing subtlety in his discovery of daughter's absence that seems to make the whole audience kin. Make the whole audience kin.

Arrah-Na-Pogue, the greatest Irish production of the year, will be the feature for Christmas day. This immense picture is in three reels, 3,000 feet long, sclipsing anything heretofore attempted.

BRAND NEW SHOW AT THE AUDI-TORIUM.

Looking bright and cheery in its pretty Christmas decorations, the Auditoilum offers a programme that is in accordance with the time of the year. Everything on the bill is bright and cheerful, from the first picture to the last act, nothing gloomy, but all pleasing and entertaining. The new acts for the last haif of the week are all of the kind that are calculated to please, i-raddock and Leighton offer a cleanical comedy singling, talking and dancing act, in which they introduce several original innovations that are bound to be appreciated.

McKissick and Shadney are a pair the very top of the list. They can a special set of scenery and everyth necessary to make up a high class not if there are any better color I team on the road, we have not seen them on the road, we have not seen them. Everyone is both surprised and delighted with the results attained with the new Zinc-White pleture screen. The pictures are all brought out with great depth and brilliamy and positively 50 per cent. brighter.

The subjects for Thursday are positively great. The favorite Thanhouser of head the list with their aviation comedy entitled The Higher the Fewer, and the picture is a whole lot furnise than the title. Some aerial stunts are introduced that will make you look twice. Two good, lively western pictures are also on hand. The Master of the Vineyard, by the Flying A Co., is unique, in the fact that it is a western picture without a cowboy. The second western picture is boy. The second western picture is entitled a Noble Red Man, and it is acted by the famous indian stock company of the Bison firm. Several big festures are sooked for Christmas day.

POLI'S THEATER.

Bringing back memories of years ago, Poll's Stock company this week in the great production of Triby is making many friends. The entire company are giving splendid portrayals, together with the elaborate staging of the play. It is in reality one of the treats of the season.

Mr. Roger Barker, the new leading man in the role of Svengall discloses.

man in the role of Svengali, discloses the fact that he is an actor of no mean ability. His conception of the musician of the Latin Quarter of Paris who hypnotizes Trilby is a work of art. His make up, enunciation, gestures and dislect are entirely in keeping with the portrayal, and that Mr. Barker will be a permanent fixture with the stock ompany here is an assured fact.

Miss Montsomery, the popular leading lady, is also increasing her many admirers. She is entirely at home in the difficult role of Trilbs, and at no time does she lose an insight of the interpretation.

Miss Catherine Clinton as a French

pensioner is worthy of special men-tion. She is a clever and most versatile actress and shows that she is an artist with rare ability. Next week the members of the company will be seen in that farcical success, "Hello, Bill." It is said to be one continuous scream of laughter and that it will be appreciated Christmas week goes with-out saying. It will also disclose fr. Barker without a makeup and give the patrons of Norwich a chance to see him as himself.
